

Brazzaville 2026: The $3.5 billion that is redefining African sovereignty

An announcement that goes beyond climate finance — With more than USD 3.5 billion mobilized for the Congo Basin Blue Fund in Brazzaville, the AfDB is sending a strong signal: African natural resources are becoming strategic assets at the heart of major global balances.

AXIS: From Technology to Governance — The challenge is no longer simply to digitize resources. AXIS offers an architecture capable of organizing, tracking, and governing the financial, environmental, and informational flows associated with strategic African resources.

The Congo Basin is changing dimensions — Long considered an environmental heritage, the Congo Basin is now emerging as a critical global infrastructure contributing to climate stability, biodiversity, and new value economies.

Trust as a driver of development — Investors, institutions, and regions are now seeking systems that guarantee traceability, compliance, and transparency. Trust is becoming an economic infrastructure as essential as roads, energy, or telecommunications.
