

To translate is to build bridges

Too much information, not enough understanding — Digital finance has never produced so many reports, conferences, and commentaries. Yet, it has never been so difficult to understand what is actually changing.

Our approach is not to promote — This series does not seek to sell a technology or defend a doctrine. Its ambition is to translate debates often reserved for specialists so that they become accessible to decision-makers, entrepreneurs and public officials in charge of the AXIS program.

A silent transformation is underway — Natural resources are becoming digital assets. Infrastructure is becoming programmable. Networks are becoming places where value is created. But one question remains: in what currency will these new assets circulate?

Understanding networks rather than slogans — Stablecoins, CBDCs, tokenized deposits: behind these words hide actors, interests, controversies and competing visions of the future.
